

Product Safety

Testing for product safety is among the VDE Institute's core tasks. It sets the groundwork for all other tests. Ever since the VDE Institute was founded, the safety of the tested electric products has been the most important focal point of our tests.

Product Safety

With VDE certifications, manufacturers have the peace of mind that their product meets current normative and legal safety requirements along with generally accepted technology rules. We support manufacturers as early as during the development process, thereby ensuring early error detection and cost savings.

Consumers can rest assured that the VDE tested product poses no hazard. As such, the VDE mark also ensures legal certainty in liability matters. For consumers, retailers and importers, the VDE mark also means a sure sign that their product complies with all requirements.

In addition to certification with the promotionally effective VDE mark, we also offer an entire assortment of additional national and international test marks and certificates. Our international service grants you access to all important markets worldwide.

Our certifications are based on national and international guidelines, standards and legal requirements. Issuing the approval for carrying the corresponding VDE label includes regular factory inspections and product supervisions to ensure that the product quality remains the same.
